

L'UMILE PIANTA.

CORRECTED ADDRESSES.

- H. G. Russell, (post) 61, Somerset Road, Meadvale, Surrey.
E. G. Dixon, (only address) The Colt, Sympson, Bletchley, Bucks.
E. M. Hartley, (home) Kirkfield, Newton-le-Willows, Lancs.; (post) c/o
Mrs. Beeley, Bowlacre, Gee Cross, Manchester.
G. M. Bradley, (home) 8, Western Terrace, The Park, Nottingham.
A. Nield, (home) Mount Pleasant House, Tunbridge Wells; (post) c/o
Mrs. Miller, 9, Suffolk Road, Edinburgh.
M. L. Wilson, (post) c/o Miss C. Heineman, Meadow Cottage, Greywell, Hants.
-

OXFORD UNIVERSITY EXTENSION MEETING.

Four House of Education students attended the first part of the Summer Meeting at Oxford. A more delightful holiday and change it would be difficult to imagine. You live in one of the women's colleges, and can compare their training, life, and education with one's own college days, and you can explore the antiquarian marvels of the colleges, or attend lectures and discussions, or loll on the river all day, according to taste.

This year's course was on "Oxford's place in England's History"—her history, her contributions to art, literature, and science, and her place in sociology as the mother of causes and movements. There was also a course on economics; lectures on "old age pensions," trades unions, &c., alternately by individualists and socialists, including Lord Courtney and Mr. St. Loe Strachey, and Mr. Philip Snowden, M.P., and Mr. George Barnes, M.P., &c. If the meeting did nothing else it affords women, who often lead very narrow lives, a marvellous opportunity of meeting and hearing the opinions of every class and every nationality on matters of social import, and compels one to realise the oneness of all civilizations, the unity of aim in all true education, and the solidarity of the race.

To descend to bathos, a fortnight's stay, including ticket for all lectures, &c., costs under £5.